Active Learning In The Online Classroom: Strategies & Teaching Techniques To Foster Student Engagement

Wednesday, December 9 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

The importance of active learning in higher education is well-established; research clearly shows that pedagogical strategies encouraging students to reflect, analyze, process and discuss course concepts lead to increased motivation, learning, critical thinking and engagement. Yet, despite these benefits, promoting active learning in the online classroom can be challenging. This webinar reviews a range of approaches that can be integrated into the synchronous and asynchronous online classroom to engage students as active collaborators in the teaching-learning dynamic. We will examine classroom assessment techniques and assignments that promote individual engagement with course material, questioning techniques that enliven asynchronous discussions, opportunities for active learning in videoconference sessions, feedback strategies that encourage active listening, instructional strategies to motivate critical thinking, and cooperative learning approaches to promote problem-solving. Throughout our exploration, the emphasis will be on practical, easy-to-implement pedagogical strategies that allows you to transform your online classroom into an active learning environment.

Objectives:

- Engage online students as active collaborators in the teaching-learning dynamic
- Integrate classroom assessment techniques to actively engage students in synchronous and asynchronous activities
- Implement effective questioning strategies to encourage active participation in asynchronous class discussions
- Integrate opportunities for active learning in synchronous video conference sessions
- Motivate critical thinking and engagement through the use of questioning, feedback and classroom activities

Active Learning In The Online Classroom: Strategies & Teaching Techniques To Foster Student Engagement

Wednesday, December 9 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Speaker(s)

B. Jean Mandernach, Ph.D. / Executive Director of the Center for Innovation in Research & Teaching
Grand Canyon University

The transition to active learning in the online classroom doesn't need to involve a radical overhaul of your course structure or preferred pedagogical strategy; rather, active learning techniques can be integrated as supplements to enhance the value and impact of your existing approach to teaching.

B. Jean Mandernach, Ph.D. is Executive Director of the Center for Innovation in Research and Teaching at Grand Canyon University. Her research focuses on enhancing student learning in the online classroom through innovative instructional and assessment strategies. In addition, she has interests in the development of effective faculty evaluation models, perception of online degrees, and faculty workload considerations. Jean received her B.S. in comprehensive psychology from the University of Nebraska at Kearney, an M.S. in experimental psychology from Western Illinois University and Ph.D. in social psychology from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.
